VOL. V....NO. 1435. NEW-YORK, THURSDAY, APRIL 24, 1856. PRICE TWO CENTS.

PRESIDENTIAL.

ARRIVAL OF MR. BUCHANAN.

Reception by the City Authorities.—Speeches of Mr. Buchanan, Mr. Bennett, Clarence Cook, and the Mayor.—Dinner with the Editors.—Visits with the Mayor.

Yesterday was a day of prodigious excitement in political circles. Hon. James Buchanan, President elect, arrived by the Arago at an early hour of the morning, and his self-sacrificing friends at once proceeded to make it public. There was great anxiety to see him, and the moment was gratified. Never before was a President elect received by the people with more genuine enthusiasm. Many a heart there was gladdened by the sight of the statesman of Wheatland, and many a one saddened by the reflection that he was about to leave us. Hour after hour the streets were thronged with people, and the Fifth Avenue Hotel was literally besieged. Many, many could not get near enough to see the object of their curiosity, much less to shake him by the hand. Many, many went away disappointed, but not disheartened. Many will go to-day, and many to-morrow, and many the day after, and many the day after that, and many the day after that, and many the day after that
